

Please leave wisconsin's law as is. It has been wonderful not to receive calls from previous suppliers. We know their numbers. If we want to contact them, let it be our choice. I used to dread picking up the telephone when I ran home from work at lunch because it was usually a telemarketer. They tend to call around 8 PM too, which is miserable when you are trying to put kids to bed. Even if you don't answer, the ring is disruptive. The people we want to have calling us respect our households. Former suppliers trying to regain our business do not. Let wisconsin's law do what it was written to do - protect our privacy and our ability to make choices within our homes. If they want to work hard to gain our business, let them do it while we are their customers. If they do a good job of that, we won't have a need to switch to another supplier!
